Strengthen Store Security While Increasing Sales

Testing inventory is an important aspect of sales, but it is at a greater risk for theft, because the packaging is already removed. The Stage Tester serves as another resource for protecting this valuable inventory, while still allowing customers access to the product. Because of its durable nature, this is a long-lasting security solution that will protect your product for a long time to come.

Your customers still receive direct access to the end product to make the determination if it is right for them. It also allows for easy to expand positioning, so that you can expand your number of test products during busy seasonal sales periods.
